

Discipline	Elective educational component 9.1. «Security aspects of international relations»
Level of higher education	first (bachelor) level
Name of specialty / educational-professional program	291 "International Relations, Public Communications and Regional Studies" / "International Relations"
Form of study	Full-time
Course, semester, duration	4th year, 8th semester, 7 credits
Semester control	Credit
Number of hours (total: including lectures / practical)	total 210 hours: 26 lectures, 22 practical
Language of instruction	English
Department that provides teaching	Department of International Relations and Regional Studies
Author of the discipline	PhD in Economics; Associate Professor of International Relations and Regional Studies Department Oksana Pikulyk
Brief description
Requirements for the beginning of the study	Understanding the essence of international relations and international security
What will be studied	The essence and principles of international security; security parameters in modern international relations; the importance of international economic, informational, environmental, military security in the modern world; the essence of security processes in modern international relations and their impact on the functioning of states.
Why it is interesting / necessary to study	The study of security aspects of international relations is relevant, since international security involves the formation and development of such a system of international relations, which is based on the observance by all states of generally accepted principles and norms of international law. The study of the discipline will allow analyzing the impact of international security on the processes taking place in the modern world.
What you can learn (learning outcomes)	To know and understand the nature and dynamics of international security, to understand the peculiarities of its provision at the global, regional and national level, to know the nature and approaches to solving international conflicts. Analyze the role of international organizations and structures in solving international security issues. To conduct a professional discussion on security issues of international relations, to argue one's position.
How to use the acquired knowledge and skills (competencies)	Ability to analyze international processes in a security context. Ability to analyze the nature and evolution of international security organizations, their place in the system of international relations.
Information support	Syllabus of the educational component, educational materials, scientific publications.